If you haven't drawn up your Will...

you may unintentionally be doing yourself and your heirs a disservice.

In the absence of a Will, your property may be distributed in a manner contrary to your wishes, and unnecessary taxes and expenses may be incurred.

If you do have a Will...

it should be reviewed periodically to allow for changes in the law and in your personal circumstances.

Minor revisions in your Will can usually be made simply by adding an amendment (a "Codicil"), without having to redraft the entire document.

For Your Peace of Mind...

- Keep your Will in a safe but readily accessible place.
  - Name someone familiar with the probate process as a co-executor, if your executor isn't experienced in such matters.
  - Avoid including retirement plan benefits in your Will, since additional taxes may result.
  - Remember to name a guardian for any minor children.
  - Be sure your spouse has a Will that is coordinated with your own.
  - Consider, from a tax standpoint, in whose name your property (both real and personal) should be held.
  - Avoid using a beneficiary as a witness to your Will, since that person might be disinherited.

The Need For a Will

Drawing a Will is the way to ensure that the fruits of your life's labors are distributed in accordance with your personal wishes. Otherwise, state law will determine how and to whom your property is distributed, regardless of what your intentions may be.

With a Will you can:

- direct the distribution of your property as you wish, rather than as the state directs
- provide security for your loved ones, accommodate the special health or education needs of a relative, and make appropriate allowances for differing income needs among family members
- select a guardian for any minor children, rather than permitting the courts to decide who is best qualified to care for them
- name a trusted personal representative for your estate, instead of having your affairs settled by a court-appointed administrator
- minimize taxes and administrative costs, to preserve as much of the estate assets as possible
- make provisions for those organizations whose programs you believe are deserving of support

Your Will Can Make a Difference

Supporting RISE Life Services Through Your Will

One of the easiest and most thoughtful ways to support RISE Life Services's vital programs is through a bequest. By joining with others in making bequests both large and small, you can enable us to continue providing essential services.

A general or outright bequest enables you to give a specific sum, or a specified percentage of the estate, to RISE Life Services.

A specific bequest may provide that RISE Life Services is to receive a specific item of real or personal property, but only if you still own that property at the time of your death.

A residuary bequest may simply state that RISE Life Services is to receive the remainder of your estate after all specific bequests have been made.

A contingent bequest may be used to provide for the distribution of property to RISE Life Services in the event one or more of your named beneficiaries does not survive you.

A life income bequest can provide the security of a lifetime income for yourself or for loved ones while assuring that resources will be available later for RISE Life Services.

Similar provisions can be made by persons who have chosen to use a Living Trust, rather than a Will, for disposing of their estate assets.

Planning Your Bequest

Most donors think in terms of making cash bequests, but through your Will you can contribute securities, real estate, a share in a family business, or other assets that are not readily saleable. Frequently overlooked are the tax advantages of designating a charitable organization as the beneficiary of retirement plan assets.

Careful planning may enable you to preserve more of your estate for your heirs, and avoid the necessity of selling off assets to pay taxes.

We would be pleased to discuss various tax-saving opportunities with you and your legal and tax advisors – in absolute confidence – at your request.

Recognizing Your Generosity

Although making a Will is a very personal matter, we would appreciate an opportunity to acknowledge the generosity of those who so thoughtfully provide for RISE Life Services through their estates. Supporters who make such provision are recognized through our Heritage Society. Provisions made by individuals who prefer to remain anonymous will, of course, be privately and discreetly acknowledged.

We have a variety of resources that may be helpful in your estate planning. So, if you're considering – or have already arranged – a bequest for RISE Life Services, won't you please let us know, in confidence, by returning the attached form?
